The Faculty

Professor William O. Aydelotte delivered papers on his current research at the University of Chicago, in December, and at Central College in March. In June, he will read a paper at a conference sponsored by the Committee on Mathematical and Statistical Methods in History at the University of Chicago. He has been on research leave during the current semester. Two monographs of his will be published in collections of essays during the coming year.

Professor Robert R. Dykstra joined the department this year as a specialist in recent American history (especially the period 1877-1920) and American social history. He earned his Ph.D. at The University of Iowa in 1964, and has taught at the universities of New Mexico and Nebraska. His study of the Kansas cattle-trading centers, The Cattle Towns, was published last year by Fred A. Knott. He also published "Northern Voters and Negro Suffrage: The Case of Iowa, 1888" in Public Opinion Quarterly, Summer, 1968. An earlier article, "The Last Days of Athens," has been reprinted in Stanley N. Katz and Stanley I. Kutler, New Perspectives on the American Past (Boston, 1969). At the April, 1969, meeting of the Organization of American Historians he read an historiographical paper, "Regional Themes in American History." In June, he will participate as a commentator at a conference on "Applications of Quantitative Methods to Political, Social and Economic History" at the University of Chicago.

Professor Lawrence E. Cendall has edited the memoirs of Lewis Einstein under the title, A Diplomat Looks Back, published by the Yale University Press. He also published an article, "The Quest for Human Rights in the World Community: A Pre-1945 American Dimension," in the Report of the Iowa Commonwealth Conference on Human Rights (Iowa City, 1968). In June, he will read a paper entitled "The Dimensions of American Involvement in War and Peacemaking, 1917-1919" at the Conference on the Archives of the United States Foreign Relations, in Washington, D.C. In October, he presented a paper, "The Historian and the Problems Arising from the Magnitude of Archival and Manuscript Sources for the Twentieth Century," at the Symposium of Archivists and Historians held in Kansas City. Professor Gallatin has been named a member of a committee of the Society of Historians of American Foreign Relations which is to advise the Department of State on the publication of the Foreign Relations series. He has been on research leave this past semester, spending a portion of his time in England completing research for his study of the American Peace Commission to Negotiate Peace at the Paris Peace Conference of 1919. His place in the department has been taken by Harold Wohl, Ph.D. 1956, Professor of History at the University of Northern Iowa.

Professor Ralph E. Gieney has published If Not, Not: The Oath of the Aragonese and the Legendary Laws of Sobra (Princeton, New Jersey, 1968). In May he gave a paper, "Finding the Constitutional Past in France, Aragon and England" at the Symposium in Renaissance Studies at La Jolla, California. Also in May he participated in the Dumbarton Oaks Byzantine Symposium.

Professor Jonathan Goldstein's book, The Letters of Demosthenes, was published in October by the Columbia University Press. In February he lectured at Harvard on "Mysticism and Eschatology in the Paintings of the Synagogue of Dura-Europos." His review of M. Goodman's Jewish Symbols will appear in a forthcoming issue of the Journal of Near Eastern Studies. Professor Goldstein will be on leave during the academic year 1969-70 working on his translation and commentary to First and Second Maccabees, to be published in the Anchor Bible Series. During the last semester, he will hold a University Research Professorship.

Professor Charles A. Hale published Mexican Liberalism in the Age of Mora, 1821-1867 (University of Kansas Press, 1965). He participated as commentator in a session at the Southern Historical Association devoted to "New Views of the Mexican Reforma." Professor Hale has received a University Research Professorship plus an award of Endowment for the Humanities for research in Mexico and the United States during 1969-70 on "An Interpretive Study of Mexican Thought and Politics, 1867-1910." Professor David Hamilton read a paper, "Popular Rebellion and Chinese Political Theory" at the Iowa History Teachers' Conference in October. His course on the History of the Far East has been carried over the campus radio, WSUI, this semester. This summer he will be visiting Assistant Professor at Harvard, with a concurrent research grant from the East Asian Research Center at Harvard.

Professor Henry Harwit is spending the current year in England, under a "Younger Scholars" Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities, continuing his research on the Parliamentary politics of the reign of William III, 1689-1702. His place in the department has been taken by Professor Jean Wilson, Emerita of Smith College.

Professor Sydney V. James has edited The New England Puritans, published as part of the Harper & Row series, Interpretations of American History. In April, he attended a meeting of the Committee on the Papers of William Penn in Philadelphia. This summer, Professor James will be doing research on the politics and society of colonial Rhode Island in Providence.

Professor James Kittelson completed his Ph.D. dissertation, Wolfgang Capito, Humanist and Reformer" during the year, and received the Ph.D. degree from Stanford in April.

Professor Sidney E. Morgan's article, "Reinterpreting American Church History," was published by the University of Chicago Press in a symposium of that title edited by Jerold C. Brauer. He published several other articles and review articles during the year: "Through and Beyond the Lines," an article-review of Alan Heintz, Religion and the American Mind: From the Great Awakening to the Revolution (Cambridge, Mass., 1965), in The Journal of Religion, July, 1969; "Neither Church Nor State: Reflections on James Madison's 'Line of Separation,'" in A Journal of Church and State, Autumn, 1968; and "Church, State, Calvinism and Conscience," a review article on two books by W. G. McLoughlin, Isaac Backus on Church, State and Calvinism, Pamphlet, 1754-1750 (1968), and Isaac Backus and the American Pietistic Tradition (1967) and on Edmund S. Morgan, Roger Williams, the Church and the State (1967), in Perspectives in American History, Spring, 1969. Professor Mead gave this year's Rauschenbusch Lectures at the Colgate Rochester Divinity School on April 8 and 9, under the general title, "Religion and America's Continuing Revolution." In October, he gave two lectures at Main View College, Des Moines: "Teaching as a Vocation," and "The Clergy and the State." In November, he gave two lectures at the University of Dubuque on the general topic "Aspects of Religion and the American Way of Life." From February 26 to March 1, 1969, he participated in a conference at Vanderbilt University on "The Forging of an American Theological Tradition: The Chicago School."

Professor Jaroslav Pelánek attended the Dumbarton Oaks Byzantine Symposium in May. He is continuing work on his monograph on "Muscovite Imperial Claims to the Kazan Khanate" to be published by Mouton & Co. in 1970. He is also currently engaged in the preparation of his projected "Anthology of the Writings of Leopold von Ranke" which will soon be published by Doubleday.

Professor Stow Persons spent the past summer at the Huntington Library doing research toward his planned monograph on the history of gentility.

Professor Alan B. Spitzer assumed the department chairmanship in September for a two-year period. Professor Spitzer has also been appointed to the editorial board of French Historical Studies. He is continuing research on his study, "Recent Theories of Revolution."

Professor Donald W. Sutherland is serving as president of the Midwest Medieval History Conference for the current academic year.

Graduates

Francis J. Bowman, Ph.D. 1929, Professor Emeritus at the University of Southern California, has spent the current year as Resident Scholar in History at Northwestern College, Orange City, Iowa, under a Title III Federal Grant which involves all the Iowa and South Dakota colleges in the Midwest College Association.

Dorsey D. Jones, Ph.D. 1929, will retire at the close of the current semester from the Department of History at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. Dr. Jones began teaching at Arkansas in 1926 and has served longer in the Department than any person since the University was founded in 1871. He has been responsible for developing Russian history as well as that of the Far East.

Paul Giddens, Ph.D. 1930, recently retired from the presidency of Hamline University, began work in September as Historical Consultant to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). His work involves making an inventory of source materials and secondary literature relating to the history of the company since 1945. He will also be building up a tape archive of the recollections of active and retired directors and other key personnel.

William D. Huntley, Ph.D. 1933, will retire in June after twenty-two years' teaching at Drake University, Des Moines. He also marks this year his tenth as editor of "The Iowa Record" section of The Iowaan magazine. He will continue as editor after retirement.

Charlton W. Tebeau, Ph.D. 1933, will retire this year as chairman of the History Department at the University of Miami, Coral Cables. He received this year's Award of Merit from the American Association for State and Local History for service to local history-teaching, editing, organizing, writing. Professor Tebeau edits Tequesta, the journal of the Historical Association of Southern Florida, and The Carrell, the publication of the Friends of the University of Miami Library.

Everett W. Thornton, Ph.D. 1933, was recently made curator for the Oklahoma Baptist Archives at Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Oklahoma. He has published an article based on the archival materials, "William Durant Moore, 1868-1922" in The Oklahoma Baptist Chronicle, Autumn, 1968.

Wynyl Hallich, Ph.D. 1934, Professor Emeritus of History at Superior State University, has made a gift of his collection of Ukrainian materials to the University of Minnesota library. The collection will form an important part of the library's Immigrant Archives, described by the Duluth News Tribune as "a unique collection of publications and manuscripts concerning immigration to the U.S. and Canada by people of eastern, central, and southern Europe."

Guy F. Hersheyberger, Jr., Ph.D. 1935, Professor Emeritus of History, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, published a review of Durnbaugh's The Brethren in Colonial America, in the March 1969 issue of Church History. A revised third edition of his War, Peace and Nonviolence is scheduled for publication by the Herald Press this year. His article, "Conscientious Objector," has been accepted for the forthcoming new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Dr. Hersheyberger is continuing his research and writing on Mennonites during the World War I period and on the development of the world-wide Mennonite relief and service program following the war.

Philip D. Jordan, Ph.D. 1935, Professor of History at the University of Minnesota, has published articles during the past year in The American Archivist, Arizona and the West, The Filson Club Quarterly, The History Teacher, Pacific Northwest Quarterly and the Southwest Quarterly. His book, Ohio Genes of Age, 1783-1900, has been reprinted in paperback by the Ohio Historical Society. He is editing, with introductions, reprints of historical classics for the University of Kentucky Press and the University of New Mexico Press. Professor Jordan was re-elected to the advisory board of GSA, National Archives, Region 6, Kansas City, this year. Professor Jordan will retire at the close of the current academic year, but plans to continue his research and writing.

Walker D. Wyman, Ph.D. 1935, Professor of History at Wisconsin State University—River Falls, is Director of Study (USOF) for Developing Graduate Programs around Regional Centers in the State Colleges and Universities in the Cutover Area of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. A book edited by Professor Wyman, History of the Wisconsin State Universities, was published by the River Falls State University Press in October.

Vernon Carstensen, Ph.D. 1936, Professor of History at the University of Washington, Seattle, spent the past summer as chairman of an ad hoc faculty committee on Black Studies. His book, Farms or Forests, has been reprinted by the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, and The Public Lands, which he edited, has been reprinted in paperback by the Wisconsin Press. Professor Carstensen is spending the current year on sabbatical completing some long-scheduled research and writing. He is continuing to serve on the editorial boards of Agricultural History and Arizona and the West.

Melvin Gingerich, Ph.D. 1937, Executive Secretary of the Menonite General Conference Historical and Research Committee, spent several months this year on a trip through the West Indies, South America, Africa, and the Far East examining and evaluating archival materials related to American Mennonite mission activities in these areas. Dr. Gingerich's book, The Christian and Revolution, was published by the Herald Press (Scottsdale, Pa.) in 1968. A manuscript of his on the history of Mennonite costume will be published this year by the Herald Press.

Gordon W. Prange, Ph.D. 1937, Professor of History at the University of Maryland, is on sabbatical leave this year, continuing research and writing on various projects pertaining to World War II in the Pacific. He will be spending part of the coming summer in Hawaii and Japan. Professor Prange has recently been consulting with Twentieth Century-Fox on the forthcoming movie, Tora, Tora, Tora, which is based on his story of the same title concerning the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Myron L. Koening, Ph.D. 1938, Dean for Academic Relations at the Foreign Service Institute, Department of State, was

John J. Kannerick, Ph.D. 1950, assumed the presidency of North Texas State University in September. He becomes executive officer of a state university with a current total enrollment somewhat in excess of 15,000. The Graduate School currently enrolls slightly over 3,000 students, of whom more than 700 are doctoral students. The Ph.D. in History has just been introduced and the first students were accepted this fall.

Two works of Paul L. Hughes, Ph.D. 1951, Professor of History at Wisconsin State University, Whitewater, were published simultaneously by the Yale University Press in May. They are: Tudor Royal Proclamations, Vol. II, The Later Tudors, 1553-1587, and Tudor Royal Proclamations, Vol. III, The Later Tudors, 1589-1603. This completes Professor Hughes' work in Tudor royal edict law. His manuscript on Stuart royal proclamations (the proclamations of King James I) has been accepted by Oxford University, London, for publication through Clarendon Press. This work should be published in 1971.

Walter F. Peterson, Ph.D. 1951, Professor of History and University Librarian at Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisconsin, has been appointed Coordinator of Continuing Education at Lawrence. He continues to edit the Transactions of the Wisconsin Academy.

Harry M. Hutson, Ph.D. 1952, has accepted the Chairmanship of the Department of History at the University of Tennessee in Martin, Tennessee. He will begin his duties there in the fall. An article of his dealing with Methodism in 19th-century England will be published in Methodist History, April, 1969.

George Brebrett, Ph.D. 1954, Chairman of the Division of Social Sciences at Bennett College, Greensboro, North Carolina, has been appointed to the Curriculum Committee of the Association of Colleges and Universities for International-Inter­cultural Studies at the annual meeting of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, in New York; he chaired the session on "The Negro in Latin America." Professor Brebrett has served this past year as a consultant to the Comprehensive School Improvement Project in North Carolina under a grant from the Ford Foundation.

Gilbert A. Cahill, Ph.D. 1954, Professor of History at S.U.N.Y. College at Cortland, has been President of the Faculty Association of the State University of New York for the past two years. He is the editor of a D.C. Heath pamphlet, "The Reform Bill of 1832—Liberal or Conservative?" and co-author of a sixth grade text book, Exploring Regions of the Eastern Hemisphere, published by the Follett Publishing Company. He has also had reviews in the American Historical Review and the Canadian Historical Review.

Lawrence J. McCaffrey, Ph.D. 1954, will transfer in June to the University of Maine as Professor of History. This past year he wrote seven essays on Irish topics for the Encyclopedia Americana. At present he is finishing a book on Irish nationalism that will be published by Pegasus Press. He is continuing research on Daniel O'Connell, and in the planning stage a book on the Irish-Americans to be called "Pioneers of the Ghetto." Professor McCaffrey is continuing his co-editing of the Reprints in Irish History series.

Morton M. Rosenbert, Ph.D. 1957, Associate Professor of History at Ball State University, has published with Dennis McClurg a monograph entitled The Politics of Pro-Slavery Sentiment in Indiana, 1816-1851. This book is a publication in the Ball State University Monograph Series. He has also published "The Ku Klux Klan in American Society" in The Negro in America, 1619-1968, published by the Ball State University Press in 1960.

George N. Daniels, Ph.D. 1963, has edited a book of readings, Darwinism Comes to America, which was published during the fall by Blaisdell Press. He has spent a great deal of time recently establishing a new center at Northwestern University, "The Center for the Interdisciplinary Study of Science and Technology," of which he has been appointed director. Professor Daniels is meanwhile continuing work on his book, Science in American Society, which he expects to complete sometime this year.

Robert J. Knowlton, Ph.D. 1963, Associate Professor of History at Wisconsin State University, Stevens Point, is the author of several articles recently published. They include: "Chaplaincies and the Mexican Reform," in the Hispanic American Historical Review, August, 1968; "Expropriation of Church Property in Nineteenth-Century Mexico and Colombia: A Comparison," The Americas, Spring, 1969; and "The Mexican Church and the Reform: Response and Results," in Historia Mexicana, Spring, 1969. Both of the latter articles are expansions of papers which Professor Knowlton read at meetings of the Southern Historical Association in November and the spring meeting of the Wisconsin Council of Latin Americans, in May, 1968. In October, Professor Knowlton chaired the opening session of the annual meetings of the Association for Latin American Studies in St. Louis. This past February, he served as discussant for a paper read by Andres Suarez, a former Cuban government official in the Castro regime and author of Cuba: Castroism and Communism, 1959-1968, at the spring meeting of the Wisconsin Council of Latin Americanists.

He is president of that Council for 1969-70.

Robert D. Linder, Ph.D. 1963, Associate Professor of History, has co-edited and contributed to, Protest and Politics: Christianity and Contemporary Affairs, published by the Attila Press, Greenwill, South Carolina. His essay was entitled "A Christian Approach to the Contemporary Civil Rights Movement." At the June commencement last year, Professor Linder received Kansas State's first annual "Distinguished Teaching Award," with a stipend of $1,000.

Thomas B. Linder, Ph.D. 1963, Professor of History at Wisconsin State University, Platteville, spent the summer of 1968 in England pursuing his study of the political behavior of the bishops of the nineteenth century Church of England. In October he read a paper on that topic at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Association of Teachers of History at Carthage College, Kenosha. He was selected as faculty observer for the Wisconsin State University system at the annual convention in November of Student Governments of the United States at Washington, D.C. He was elected Distinguished Teacher of the Year, 1968, by the faculty and students of his university, and received a monetary award from the Murphy Foundation of La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Robert L. Gold, Ph.D. 1964, has spent the current academic year at the State University of New York-Geneseo, whence he will return to his regular duties in the Department of History of Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, in the fall. His book, Borderland Empires in Transition: The Triple-Nation Frontier of Florida, was published this spring by Southern Illinois University Press. During the past summer, Professor Gold served as visiting professor at the University of the Americas, Mexico City, Mexico, where he presented a course on Twentieth-Century Mexico.

Don S. Kieschene, Ph.D. 1964, who teaches at Simon Fraser University, Burnaby, British Columbia, received a Canada Council Grant last summer for research on "Images of the City in 20th-Century America."

Richard V. Pierard, Ph.D. 1964, Associate Professor of History at Indiana State University, Terre Haute, is co-editor (with two other Iowa Ph.D.'s as noted above) of a book, Protest and Politics: Christianity and Contemporary Affairs. Professor Pierard's own contribution to the book is entitled "Christianity, Democracy and the Radical Right." He has also published "A Case Study in German Economic Imperialism: The Colonial Review Committee, 1896-1914," in the Scandinavian Economic History Review, December, 1968. In the spring of last year, he lectured on African History in an NDEA Institute for Advanced Study in Non-Western History at Indiana State University, and he is Director of the University's Foreign Study Program in Germany for the coming summer.

Rudolph Heinze, Ph.D. 1965, has been promoted to Associate Professor of History and appointed Department Chairman at Concordia State Teachers' College. An article of his, "The Pricing of Meat: A Study in the Use of Royal Proclamations in the Reign of Henry VIII.", has been accepted for publication in The Historical Journal.

Samuel T. McSweeney, Ph.D. 1965, who teaches history at Brooklyn College of the City University of New York, delivered two papers before scholarly conferences last year. They were: "Voting in the Northeastern States during the Late Nineteenth Century," at the University of Wisconsin Political and Social History Conference in May, 1968; and "The Political Realignment of the 1890's: Observations on the Northeast," at a conference on "American Political Behavior—New Approaches" held at S.U.N.Y. College at Cortland in October.
Robert P. Swierenga, Ph.D. 1965, joined the History Department at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, as Associate Professor of History in August. This past summer, a Dutch-language emigrant memoir, Second Voice from Pella (1849), which Professor Swierenga translated and edited, appeared in the Annals of Iowa, under the title "A Place of Refuge." He continued his study of 19th-century tax-paying in Iowa during the summer under a grant from the Council on Research in Economic History.

Gilbert Allardyce, Ph.D. 1966, has been promoted to Associate Professor of History at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton. He has been awarded a Canada Council Fellowship grant for research in France next year.

Weldon S. Crowley, Ph.D. 1966, is completing his first year as Director of the Overseas Study Center in India for Collinson College, an experimental program of the University of the Pacific. His activities for the year have centered around speaking to university and student groups about educational aims and procedures. He expects to return to the University of the Pacific and continue for one or two more years his work in developing experimental and innovating models for undergraduate curricula.

Hamilton Cravens, Ph.D. 1969, has accepted a regular position as Instructor in History at Iowa State University, where he will be responsible for developing courses in American Intellectual History and the History of Science in America. He will deliver a paper, "American Social Psychologists and the Discovery of the Idea of Culture, 1889-1917," at the Pacific Coast Branch meetings of the American Historical Association in August. The paper is part of a session called "Psychology and the Making of the Twentieth-Century American Viewpoint."

Ernst A. Erickson, Ph.D. 1967, has joined the Department of History at the College of the Pacific of the University of the Pacific, Stockton, California, effective in September. His recent publications include: "Money and Banking Services in a Bankless State: The Case of Iowa, 1946-1957," in the Business History Review; "Iowa's First Bank: The Minaeza Bank of Dubuque," in the Annals of Iowa; "Money in Early Nineteenth-Century United States," North Dakota Quarterly; "A North Dakota Farm Auction in the Great Depression," in North Dakota Quarterly; and "The Wall Street Crash of October, 1929," in Spiegel Historica. Professor Erickson was awarded the Harvard-Newcomen Society Postdoctoral Fellowship in Business History for the current academic year, which he has been spending in residence at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in study and research.

William L. Bowers, Ph.D. 1963, Assistant Professor of History at Bradley University, Peoria, Illinois, will spend the first semester of 1969-70 on sabbatical revising and expanding his dissertation. He is also currently working on a collection of primary sources from the Progressive era. In November, he read a paper, "Teaching Negro History," at an NEA institute at Bradley.

David C. Lukowith, Ph.D. 1968, Assistant Professor of History at Hamline University, St. Paul, has received a sabbatical leave for the academic year 1969-70. He plans to spend all or most of the year in Great Britain doing research on his study of British Pacifism during the nineteen-thirties.

George R. Nielsen, Ph.D. 1968, will spend from June, 1969, to February, 1970, in Australia on a Fulbright Advanced Research Award, studying the Wends as part of a comparative history of the Wends of Australia and Texas.

Clifford H. Scott, Ph.D. 1968, has become Assistant Professor of History at Indiana University—Fort Wayne. In April, 1968, he read a paper on "Protestant Missionary Images of Black Africans, 1900-1940," at the Dallas OAH meeting. This spring he read two papers on similar topics: "Afro-American Images of Africa in the Twentieth Century," at the Indiana University—Fort Wayne Lecture Series in March; and "Search for Identity: Afro-Americans and Black Africa," at the Ball State University Afro-American History Conference in April. This summer Professor Scott will be doing research at the National Archives in Washington on American missionaries in Africa.

Graduate Students

Robert Neymeyer, M.A. 1966, working under Professor Celfand's direction, won one of the two honorary mentions in the William Lyons Competition for his thesis, "The Role of the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council in the United States-Brazilian Relations, 1934-1943."

Shomer Zwelling, M.A. 1966, also under the direction of Professor Celfand, was awarded first prize in the same competition for his thesis, "The German Thesis Concerning the Diplomacy of American Territorial Expansion." His manuscript will be published in book form during the current year.

Degrees

Iowa History Conference

This year's History conference was held on March 28. The three talks given were based on the theme, "Urbanization and Racial Tension in the Americas," and the speakers were drawn from a variety of national origins and academic disciplines. Roy Simon Bryce, an assistant professor of sociology at Hunter College who is a native of Panama, spoke on "The Black Community and Overcentralized Education," at the morning session. Professor Richard M. Morse, of the History Department at Yale, took as his topic "The Urban Disturbed: The Lesson of Latin America," at the luncheon session, and Richard C. Wade, Professor of History at the University of Chicago, spoke on "Urbanization and Segregation: History's Handmaidens," in the afternoon.

Summer Session, 1969

Professor Lawrence Celfand will be this year's Summer Session Chairman. He will offer a course in American foreign relations from 1890 to the present. Several other members of the department are also planning summer offerings. Professor William Peterson will teach the history of Iowa. Professor Sidney Mead will give a course on American religious institutions and one on Puritanism in the shaping of America.
